How did the Fund perform during the reporting period?

The Cantor Fitzgerald Equity Opportunity Fund, Institutional Shares, returned 18.93%, net of fees for the nine months to end the fiscal year on September 30, 2025, outpacing the MSCI USA Mid Cap Index return of 8.62%.

The Fund's holdings in the Communication Services and Materials sectors were the most significant contributors to positive relative performance, while its positioning in Health Care and Information Technology (IT) sectors were lagging.

The Fund's two holdings in the Communication Services sector were both strong contributors to performance for the nine-month period. Roblox (+140.4%), a platform for 3-D content development, saw surging bookings and growth in daily active users. Take-Two Interactive (+39.8%), an interactive gaming and entertainment solutions company, saw positive reaction to the upcoming schedule of game releases. In the Materials sector, gold and minerals mining company Barrick Mining (+112.2%) was the top contributor.

On the negative side, in Health Care, life sciences company Illumina (-42.3%) delivered solid earnings but suggested caution regarding government funding going forward. Pharmaceutical sales and data services provider IQVIA (-30.5%) continued to disappoint on operating margin as customers were scrutinizing service budgets. In the Information Technology sector, the Fund did not own top performing companies Cloudflare and Seagate Technology. Among stocks held in the Fund, software company Elastic (-15.7%) was the primary detractor, as revenue generation lagged expectations.

Markets remain intensely focused on whether the unprecedented AI-led valuation surge is sustainable, with history suggesting caution. Fiscal spending, fintech productivity, and resilient consumer demand are pushing growth expectations higher, but trade and inflation uncertainty leaves significant room for surprises. We continue to see opportunities in equity markets and expect favorable returns to companies that can effectively navigate the uncertainty and deliver unexpectedly good earnings.
